

Crime Unit Says Attitude Changes Require Less Strict 'Sin' Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's changing attitude toward drinking and gambling, says the President's crime commission, requires less strict criminal laws in those areas.

Numerous so-called sin laws that police who could otherwise concentrate on matters threatening public safety, the commission said. Some of the laws aren't enforced anyway, it added in a report made public Sunday night.

Although strong laws should be maintained to control vice, crime, child molestation and organized crime, "the situation is less serious than it was when the commission was formed," it said. "The situation is less serious than it was when the commission was formed," it said. "The situation is less serious than it was when the commission was formed," it said.

It is these laws which often are not enforced, the panel reported. It quoted Thurston Arnold, author and former judge, as saying they are "unneeded, because we want to continue our conduct, and unneeded because we want to preserve our morals."

The market is persistent for prostitution, the commission said, recommending that laws against it be limited to cases where organized business activity is involved or where there is public solicitation.

The commission said gambling has survived the condemnations of the criminal law and should be allowed on a private basis and for charitable and religious fund raising.

Drunkness accounted for nearly one-third of the nearly five million arrests last year, but should be removed from the criminal law process and treated for what it really is, a social problem of alcoholism and poverty, the commission said.

Of one million abortions performed annually, only one percent are legal, the panel said. It added that a possible approach to the problem would be legalizing abortions in cases where the mother or child is threatened, or when pregnancy results from rape or incest.

The report urged severe punishment for those who sell drugs and said there should be adequate treatment facilities for addicts.

The commission suggested that the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover, as saying society tends to make regard to enforcement, and changing social concepts.

"The result is that the criminal code becomes society's trash bin," he said. "The police are expected to rummage around in this material and are expected to prevent everything that is unlawful."

Such required work by police officers, the commission said, impairs their effectiveness in "protecting the public, against serious threats" and "must turn to denouncing or degrading or of little relevance to the mission of law enforcers."

The report, second of nine written by task forces on the commission, also recommended elimination of popular election as the sole means of selecting judges, trustees to spread bail reform, and reviewing of warrants, and directing "from the bottom up" to train police officers.

Who Forgot To Wind The Sun Dial?

By CATHERINE TAYTE
Times-Idaho Staff Writer

"It's a dark day for sundials and horological people. It's a day that has been forthcoming since 1400 A. D., when clocks were invented."

Prior to that historic date, the sundials stochastically had waited for the sun to come out in order to record the time of day on their flat, usually horizontal plates. Since 2000 B.C., the sundial gnomons had served man's need to know the correct time of day.

Superior to later electronic and other mechanical devices, they stood silently for thousands of years—never needing winding. They didn't rust, were practically shock-proof and could be fully immersed in water and towed behind an ocean liner for 30 days and still maintain absolute accuracy.

If the sun was shining, that is.

Regardless of all these advantageous qualities, man's oldest known device for the measurement of time reached a complete comedown in the spring of 1967 when the state of Idaho adopted Daylight Saving Time.

Sundials are out of business.

Edward Wright, 48, is one of the American citizens who are saddened by the sundial's near-oblivion. David, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wright, Kimberly, can't even tell time "all the way" now. His old grandfather is old enough to recognize the point of a useful invention.

His grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Layd K. Wright, also Kimberly, have a sundial in their back yard. It has stood there for more than 20 years. The sundial has stood there for more than 20 years. The sundial has stood there for more than 20 years. The sundial has stood there for more than 20 years.

Now, during the early spring and summer months, the sundial will lose its most precious quality—accuracy. It will accurately be one hour too late.

According to the World Book, sundials are based on the fact that the shadow of an object will move from one side to another as the sun moves from the east in the west. That object is called a gnomon by Webster, and its shadow falls on a flat, usually horizontal plate. Sundials are believed to have been used in Babylon as early as 2000 B.C., according to Larion Dill, reference librarian at the Twin Falls Public Library.

The particular sundial owned by David's grandparents was manufactured as a hobby by a Portland, Ore. The structures are now used primarily as yard and landscape decorations. Mrs. Wright said. Price varies from as low as $20 to hundreds of dollars, depending on the material used and ornaments added to the sundials, she added.

From a timepiece to yard ornament—the shadow has certainly fallen on sundials.

SO WHO FORGOT to wind the sundial? Certainly not David Wright, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wright, Kimberly. David, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wright, Kimberly, can't even tell time "all the way" now. His old grandfather is old enough to recognize the point of a useful invention.

Tornadoes Blast South And Midwest

By The Associated Press

Wide sections of the South and Midwest were jarred over the weekend by tornadoes that left death and destruction in their wakes.

Hardest hit were areas in six Southern states. One woman was killed and at least 25 persons were injured when tornadoes touched ground near Moxley, Ga. about 25 miles north of the state of Mississippi, said the U.S. Weather Service.

Police estimated damage at a million dollars in the West-central part of Birmingham which was hit by a tornado. Police reported, and returned to Birmingham, Ala. Sunday.

Some landlides, brought on by heavy rain, were reported in eastern Kentucky.

The municipal airport in Galesburg, Ill., was hit by a twister Sunday evening that destroyed five light airplanes. One of them was blown a quarter of a mile. No one suffered serious injury.

Two barns were destroyed in a regular size of the town.

Prospects Dismal For Action On Trade Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Prospects for congressional action on this year's President Johnson's proposal to expand East-West trade are dismal. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said today.

Indicating he had discussed the matter with the White House, Mansfield said he was "not optimistic" about the prospects for action on the plan.

Many Republicans and some Democrats have argued it makes little sense to trade with the Soviets when they are stepping up shipment of war materials to the North Vietnamese.

Mansfield said the outlook for action "looks dismal."

"We are looking a little more time than usual to take a careful look at all major legislation," he said. "We are looking a little more time than usual to take a careful look at all major legislation," he said.

The 70-year-old general, hospitalized for five other major illnesses, including a heart attack and two major surgical operations since 1955, entered a major hospital in New York City Sunday night after an ambulance ride from his home in Gettysburg, Pa.

The provisional diagnosis was acute gastroenteritis, an acute inflammation of the lining of the stomach and the small intestine.

All evidence presently available from the hospital indicates that doctors there do not look upon the case as a serious, life-threatening one, at least in the present.

Open Housing March Set In Louisville

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Louisville open housing leaders say they are planning to return to the city's Wyandotte Park area tonight to the school board to demand a 10 per cent wage increase, but have now apparently withdrawn the request.

Thomas said the school's originally were to be closed Sunday, May 21, and the makeup day probably would be set for the following Monday, May 22.

Thomas said that by mid-morning the teachers had not requested a meeting with the school board on the salary question.

Narcotics Probe Results In 5 Arrests

By The Associated Press
Narcotics investigations resulted in the arrest of five young men and seizure of more than $5,000 worth of marijuana and LSD-impregnated candles and amphetamines at Moses Lake and Pullman, Wash., over the weekend.

Chief Sheriff's Deputy John Andrews of Moses Lake said four were arrested Saturday night in the culmination of a three-month investigation of the sale, possession and use of dangerous drugs in the Moses Lake, Ephrata and Othello areas.

Three of the men were arrested after they came to a Moses Lake apartment and completed a sale to plainclothes officers. The apartment was rented and used by sheriff's investigators several months.

The three were identified as Frank Leslie Holmes Jr., 23, Michael D. Dunn, 21, and Timothy W. Gohin, 19, all of Moses Lake. They were jailed at Ephrata on charges of sale and possession of dangerous drugs. An hour later, Nicholas Stevenson, 26, Quilley, Wash., was arrested in a car parked in front of the apartment building. He was booked in jail at Ephrata for possession of narcotics and dangerous drugs.

Andrews said an estimated $5,500 worth of LSD-impregnated candles and amphetamines were seized when the apartment and former Seattle residents were made. Seattle was the source of the drugs, Andrus said.

Frank said Olson was booked in a similar investigation in a charge of possession of a narcotic resulting in the arrest of drug. Maryanna found in early Sunday of Robert Poon's apartment was confiscated, Olson, 23, bartender, part-time Paris said.

Ex-CIA Aide Tells Goals Of Program

NEW YORK (AP) — Thomas W. Braden, a newspaper publisher and former Central Intelligence Agency official, says he created the CIA program sub-subsiding abroad — including the UAW — to help the UAW fight the UAW.

Braden, former president of the California Board of Education and a California state legislator, is editor and publisher of the Oceanside (Calif.) Times-News.

In an article he has written for the May 20 issue of the Saturday Evening Post, he personally gave the money to UAW President Walter Reuther to influence West German labor unions.

Reuther replied that on one occasion the UAW had "agreed" to use the funds for

Peace Vigil Staged During Rusk's Visit

SCARSDALE, N.Y. (AP) — Secretary of State Dean Rusk returned Sunday to the New York City suburb where he once lived to receive a civic award and join into a peace vigil.

More than 300 persons staged a silent peace vigil in the rain outside the high school where Rusk was presented the May 20th of the Year award. Some 1,000 persons gathered at the school auditorium for the ceremony.

The vigil went on without a word spoken, under a banner which read "We are not in Vietnam." The vigil was not to protest the award "but the policy of military escalation in Vietnam," said the secretary of state and the Johnson administration.

After accepting the Scar-dale, Rusk said he was "proud" to receive the award. He then turned the award over to the protesters. He then turned the award over to the protesters.

Herbert Robinson, a New York City resident, said he was "proud" to receive the award. He then turned the award over to the protesters.

Kennedys End Trip On Hudson River

By J. HUNTER HOLLOWAY
NORTH CREEK, N.Y. (AP) — Sen. and Mrs. Robert F. Kennedy now know the upper Hudson River in wilderness areas is rough, cold and fun.

The Kennedys, Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall and their families, traveled through about 20 miles of swirling rapids near this Adirondack hamlet Saturday and Sunday. There were plenty of spills in the cold water but members of the party said they enjoyed clanking through rapids in canoes, kayaks and rafts.

"Caroline Kennedy, daughter of the late President John F. Kennedy, seven of the senator's oldest children, Mrs. Kennedy and one of Udall's sons took part in the activities, which included a 13-mile-long trip Saturday and a 7-mile race Sunday. Udall participated Saturday but was only an onlooker Sunday.

Kennedy and Udall, both Democrats, entered the 10th annual White-water Derby each, along with his partner, finished among the leaders.

When the clock was advanced an hour for Daylight Saving Time, the 6 and 8 clock dropped back an hour from Eastern Standard Time, making it two hours slow.

"I can't explain it," said Ben D. Harvey, cashier. "We had the thing set right the other day. I think it's just a coincidence—that it dropped back exactly two hours."

Unscrupulous Terrorists Stalk Streets of Saigon

By TOM TIEDE
SAIGON, Vietnam (NEA)—It was a particularly sunny evening and the soldier in the light shirt wiped his beads of perspiration from his forehead as he walked through the streets of Saigon. He was a native police officer, a man of about 30, with a friendly smile. He was walking toward his home, a small, one-story building in the heart of the city. He was walking alone, and he was walking in the dark.

Tom Tiede

full-length mirror, a shadow in the shop doorway caught the corner of his eye and he whirled quickly to see a grinning young man aiming at him with a large pistol. "No, don't!" the soldier cried. But the pistol exploded. And the soldier collapsed. The bullet bored through the serviceman's right eye and out the back of his head. The assassin fled out into the crowded boulevard. The victim thrashed painfully about on the shop floor. Spectators gathered and stood huddled over the man. He was spitting blood and weeping softly. He survived three minutes. Then as he died he gasped, "Why?" The answer, unfortunately, is as old as warfare. The assassin was executing a perverted form of duty, indiscriminate terrorism.

the rural areas, they may decide to take their revenge in the towns where small numbers of guerrillas could strike fear into large numbers of people. It would be a rather easy undertaking. Saigon is vulnerable because its very, its confusion and because no less than 35,000 future guerrillas are located within a day's walk of its border. These guerrillas, more importantly, are flecked with trained cadres, who will blindly undertake any risk. One such was killed recently trying to blast an Army barracks near a large schoolhouse. "What about the school?" he was asked. "It did not matter," he replied. "And the kids?" "They neither."

"What if some had been killed?" "The mission was vital. The children were not." With this kind of fanaticism poured in VC strategy, local citizens aren't as worried about the mere increase of terrorism as such as they are an all-out lack of supplies, attacks. Their point is that it isn't the amount of terrorism that causes trouble, it's the type. Thus far, Communists have played it relatively low key in Saigon, with little noteworthy effect. They could change this approach, however, and concentrate on more painful terror tactics. Such as, perhaps, murdering those they assassinate 10 people in Saigon every night and then do it.

Such losses are not, certainly, but they are realistic. And as the war continues to go well, people here feel that the countryside victories will leave a blood debt and that the city may have to pay it off.

Letters To Agency Heads Ineffective

BOISE (AP)—Letters written to heads of Idaho state agencies regarding use of legislative appropriations, appear to have had little effect upon the recipients. The letters were signed by the co-chairmen of the Legislative Finance—Appropriations Committee—Sen. Don Loveland, R-Barley, and Rep. Jordan L. Palmer, R-Mald. They were dated April 11 but were not made public until Saturday.

The letters were to heads of Idaho State University, the University of Idaho, Lewis-Clark Normal School and the Department of Health and Public Assistance. They suggested changes including:—Use of appropriations for the two universities to continue the adult—or continuing—education program of night classes. —A gradual change of Lewis-Clark Normal School into a two-year liberal arts and technical school.

—Continued aid to the blind from public assistance appropriations. —An "extensive review" of the State Board of Education. The State Board of Education met two weeks ago and decided to make no change in Lewis-Clark's status. It also voted to discontinue the continuing education program because funds for it were not provided.

Idaho's vocational rehabilitation service director, Lloyd Young, said Saturday he had asked Good Will Industries Inc., of Denver, to establish operations in southern Idaho because the newly-created Idaho Community Development Bank had been provided with no funds. Idaho would be threatened with loss of services for blind and other handicapped persons provided by Life, Inc. of Boise, he said, because the commission was responsible for funding such services now.

Garrison To Seek Inquiry In CIA Role

NEW ORLEANS, La. (AP)—The New Orleans State-Attorney General today said he expects to seek a full-scale Senate inquiry into the Central Intelligence Agency's role in the Warren Commission's investigation of the Kennedy assassination.

The New Orleans district attorney claims the CIA and the Federal Bureau of Investigation cooperated in concealing facts behind the assassination of President John F. Kennedy from both the Warren Commission and the American public. Garrison said he will take steps later this week to convene the Senate of the need for a full-scale investigation.

Garrison, who launched his own probe last October into the assassination, has said he expects to prove that Kennedy died as a result of a plot hatched here. The Warren Commission said it found no evidence of a conspiracy.

In an exclusive interview with Garrison, the State-Attorney general said he was completely sure in his conclusion that Kennedy was shot by Lee Harvey Oswald, acting alone. Garrison's latest statement supported a copyright story in the States-Item Friday that the investigation had turned up mounting evidence of CIA involvement in Kennedy's death.

Will You Remember Your Mother?

By NORMAN HERRETT
It has been said that the word "mother" is the greatest in the entire English language for that matter. It symbolizes the love that all of us feel for the great love who bore us and nurtured us through all the days and nights when we were growing up.

Then we attained womanhood and manhood and Mother never got over that "baby love" for us. We're still "her little boy or little girl" and we'll always be tied—emotional, at least—to her maternal apron strings.

Very soon now Mother's Day is coming. I call this to your attention—although I probably don't need to—because of all the people who deserve a remembrance of your abiding love. She stands out above them all.

Will you remember Mother on Mother's Day? Of course you will. And if you want to get her something especially nice, you will come here and let us help you select an enduring gift for her. Hundreds of gifts are here. Gifts in gold, Gifts in silver, Watches, Cameos, Jewels. Any one will make her genuinely happy and you can easily afford the gift you'd love to give for our prices are most reasonable and our easy terms make gift giving so very simple and pleasant. Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN
DEAR ABBY: A million thanks for printing Suzanne's letter complaining about one of the TV commercials which advertising agencies show down the viewers' throats. It's high time somebody voiced a complaint.

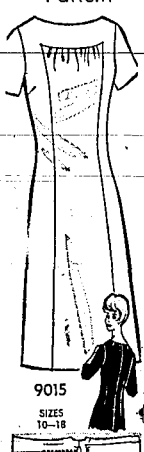

As a woman of Swedish extraction, I find one coffee commercial extremely hard to take. A young married couple is shown at breakfast. The man takes a sip of coffee after which he registers obvious displeasure. Then the young wife runs tearfully to her neighbor, "Mrs. Olson," a motherly type. The inexpressive wife begs Mrs. Olson for her "secret" in making good coffee, whereupon Mrs. Olson, in the worst possible Swedish accent, reveals that she buys the coffee that is "mountain brew." Heaven preserve us!

ALL NAUSEATED
DEAR ABBY: I am glad you mentioned how offensive some TV commercials are. My pet peeve happens to be a candy commercial. It shows a man eating a candy bar while he tells how delicious it is. He keeps talking about the candy while he stuffs his face with more and more of it. It is positively revolting!

I have tried to teach my children not to talk with their mouths full, and then they see a grown man doing exactly what I have told them they must never do.

Please tell the candy people that I am one mother who will not buy their candy as long as they do this.

DEAR ABBY: I've bet the people who spend fortunes on TV advertising would be sick if they knew how few people are actually sold by it. In the first place, you get all the products moved up. They all make the same claims. For instance, I couldn't tell you to save my life which cigarette tastes good like a cigarette, or which one is longer, or has the real tobacco flavor, is milder, cooler, has the filter tip, or which is the world's largest-selling cigarette. After seeing people who would rather fight than switch—and others who happily use their hate, no one knows which programs are brought to us by which cigarette company.

I have more confidence in advertising I can read and read. I don't go for this "now you see it, now you don't" stuff you get on television.

DEAR ABBY: A male's way of retelling to TV viewers who treat their viewers as morons is as follows:

In all fairness, I carefully observe all commercials—once. If the message abuses my senses, I carefully note the product being advertised, and then I decide which product not to buy.

My theory: Why should I read what I don't want?

DEAR ABBY: About TV commercials, I hate to use in on a TV program and be subjected to a commercial which brings a bunch of screaming kids into my living room. I have a house full of my own, and I certainly don't need any more. No one will ever sell me a headache remedy by giving me a headache!

DEAR ABBY: Re: TV commercials: Most of them are offensive in that they insult the intelligence of anyone more than 10 years old. But some are delightful! I show my appreciation for the good ones by buying the product.

How has the world been treating you? Unload your problems on Dear Abby, Box 6709, Los Angeles, Cal. 90069. For a personal, unpublished reply, enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

DEAR ABBY: I've bet the people who spend fortunes on TV advertising would be sick if they knew how few people are actually sold by it. In the first place, you get all the products moved up. They all make the same claims. For instance, I couldn't tell you to save my life which cigarette tastes good like a cigarette, or which one is longer, or has the real tobacco flavor, is milder, cooler, has the filter tip, or which is the world's largest-selling cigarette. After seeing people who would rather fight than switch—and others who happily use their hate, no one knows which programs are brought to us by which cigarette company.

I have more confidence in advertising I can read and read. I don't go for this "now you see it, now you don't" stuff you get on television.

DEAR ABBY: A male's way of retelling to TV viewers who treat their viewers as morons is as follows:

In all fairness, I carefully observe all commercials—once. If the message abuses my senses, I carefully note the product being advertised, and then I decide which product not to buy.

My theory: Why should I read what I don't want?

DEAR ABBY: About TV commercials, I hate to use in on a TV program and be subjected to a commercial which brings a bunch of screaming kids into my living room. I have a house full of my own, and I certainly don't need any more. No one will ever sell me a headache remedy by giving me a headache!

DEAR ABBY: Re: TV commercials: Most of them are offensive in that they insult the intelligence of anyone more than 10 years old. But some are delightful! I show my appreciation for the good ones by buying the product.
